CAMPUS

Dear Randy:

Attached is a proposal from the School of Communication to add three new minors, effective Spring 2008 or as soon as possible thereafter. This proposal was approved by the ASC CCI on November 30. Previous to that, it was approved by the CCI Subcommittee on Social and Natural Science (Subcommittee “C”), and the SBS Curriculum Committee.

The minors will join an already existing general communications minor. The three new minors, attached for CAA deliberation, comport with the new undergraduate tracks approved several years ago in Communication. The three minors are: Communication Technology; Organizational Communication; and Media and Society. In alignment with ASC requirements, these minors will require a minimum grade of C- in order for a course to be listed on the minor and a student must achieve a minimum cumulative point-hour ratio of 2.00 in order to receive the minor.

The School of Communication’s new undergraduate tracks have been quite effective in responding to specific areas of study of interest to undergraduate majors in ways that can help students find appropriate and useful career and academic pathways. These new minors extend some of these benefits to non-majors who might find specific communications skills of use in their future career planning.

Examples of ways in which these minors might benefit students from other majors include:

- For the Communication Technology Minor, helping humanities-based majors acquire skills related to the design of web materials and other interactive media
- For the Organizational Communication Minor, helping Business majors gain skill in decision making techniques and theories
- For the Media and Society Minor, helping students interested in non-profit management learn skills related to public opinion and media advocacy

I look forward to being of assistance during the CAA deliberation process.

Sincerely,

Edward Adelson
Associate Executive Dean

Subject: Proposed revisions to the Minor in Communications
From: Mike Vasey

Subcommittee C initially considered the proposal for the revisions to the Minor in Communications on October 30, 2007. Clarifications to the proposal were sought leading to the revised proposal which was considered on November 20, 2007. After a thorough discussion, the subcommittee was very favorably impressed by the proposed new minors and voted unanimously to approve the proposed revisions with one straightforward contingency: that Communications would submit the course changes necessary to open the courses in the minors to non-majors. It is our understanding that Communications has arranged for a blanket course change to accomplish this and thus has met this contingency.

The proposed revision to the Communications minor adds three specialized minors to the current minor, which is designed to offer an overview of the field as a whole. The three new specialized minors focus on specific aspects of the field: Communication Technology, Organizational Communication, and Media and Society. Each of these new minors is described below.

1. Communication Technology Minor

The minor in Communication Technology is intended to provide students with a basic understanding of communications technology and its impact on society. The minor is designed to include an introduction to basic skills for designing websites and other interactive media. The minor requires completion of one foundational course (Communications 240: Introduction to Communication Technology – 5 credit hours) and at least three additional courses (for a minimum of 15 credits hours) chosen from among ten alternatives ranging from the 300-level to the 600-level. Students are strongly encouraged to complete the foundational course before enrolling in the electives.

2. Organization Communication Minor

The minor in Organizational Communication is intended to provide students with an understanding of how organizations communicate with internal and external constituencies. The minor requires completion of one foundational course (Communications 325: Introduction to Organizational Communications – 5 credit hours) and at least three additional courses (for a minimum of 15 credit hours) chosen from among seven alternatives ranging from the 300-level to the 600-level. Students are strongly encouraged to complete the foundational course before enrolling in the electives.
3. Media and Society Minor

The minor in Media and Society is intended to provide students with an understanding of the impact of media on everyday life. The minor requires completion of one foundational course (Communications 642: Mass Communications and Society – 5 credit hours) and at least three additional courses (for a minimum of 15 credit hours) chosen from among seven alternatives ranging from the 500-level to the 600-level. Students are strongly encouraged to complete the foundational course before enrolling in the electives.

The principal foci for questions and discussion were:

1. The appropriateness of the focus areas.

2. The need to change the pre-requisites for the courses in the minors to enable non-majors to enroll. Many of the courses listed on these minors are currently open only to Communications majors.
November 15, 2007

Dear members of the ASC CCI, Subcommittee C,

Please find enclosed our revised proposal to introduce three minors in communication. In this version, we have elaborated on the descriptions of minors, career opportunities associated with each minor, and potential synergies between minors and other majors. In addition, a few edits were made to improve the flow of the document.

Also, I would like to respond to the questions that came up during the first review. In our proposal, we had listed a number of courses that had major status as a prerequisite. If the proposals are approved, the prerequisites for these courses will be changed to majors or minors. Students interested in pursuing a minor in communication will be required to meet with one of our undergraduate advisors. After being tagged as minors, students will be able register for classes through the online window.

Some of our courses are limited to our majors to avoid long waiting lists and to facilitate on-time graduation. It was never our intent to offer minors to our majors, though we were not explicit about this issue in the proposal. Communication minors are only for non-majors. To avoid confusion, we have stated this explicitly in the minor sheets.

If you would like further clarification, please feel free to get in touch with me.

Sincerely,

Prabu David
Director of Undergraduate Studies
Proposal for New Communication Minors
Revised Proposal Submitted to the Arts and Sciences Curriculum Committees
Nov 15, 2007

The School of Communication offers three focus areas for communication majors: Strategic Communication, Communication and Technology, and Communication Analysis and Practices.

The minors are intended for majors from other fields who are interested in an area of communication. In our proposal, we had listed a number of courses that have major status as a prerequisite. If the proposals are approved, the prerequisites for these courses will be changed to majors or minors. Students interested in pursuing a minor in communication will be required to meet with one of our undergraduate advisors. Once they are tagged as minors, they can register for classes through the online window.

Some of the courses in our major focus areas are open to students from other units. Based on informal student feedback and cursory analysis, it appears that non-majors who take our courses are taking a number of offerings within a focus area. However, the specialized course work completed by these students is not explicitly recognized as a specialized area of study.

The proposed minors are intended to fill this gap by providing students from other units an opportunity to obtain a specialized minor in one of three areas of communication study, which will be mentioned on the transcript:

- Communication Technology
- Organizational Communication
- Media and Society

Descriptions and requirements for each of the proposed minors are attached. The specialized minors have a uniform configuration, which includes a foundational course and three electives from a list of courses. For the benefit of comparison, the current communication minor, which is designed to offer an overview of the field, is also included as part of this submission.

Projected Enrollments and Impact on Major
Currently, the School offers a general minor that provides an overview of the field, with an enrollment of approximately 70 minors. With the introduction of the new minors, we predict that enrollments in the general minor might go down as students select the specialized minors. At the same time, we expect to see an increase in minors who are attracted to the specialized minors. We predict that the number of students getting a minor in our program is likely to grow from approximately 70 to approximately 110.
With the introduction of the minors, we do not foresee any significant impact in our ability to cater to the needs of our majors. Many of the students interested in a communication minor are already enrolled in our courses. The proposed minors offer a more formal structure and an incentive for students to pursue a programmatic focus. Also the mention of a specialized minor on the transcript could provide our students an advantage as they compete with students from other institutions for career opportunities.

Impact on Student Advising
The School of Communication has three full-time advisors, who are already offering academic and career counseling to non-majors interested in our courses and students enrolled in our existing minor. According to our advisors, the proposed minors are clearly defined and each is tied to career opportunities that are easy to explain. In short, with the introduction of these new minors we hope that it would be easier to advise non-majors and minors who are interested in studying communication.
Communication Technology Minor

The minor in Communication Technology provides students with an understanding of the impact of communication technology on society and an introduction to basic skills required for designing websites and other interactive media.

Students with an interest in understanding of the social impacts of new communication technologies would find this minor most beneficial. Topics such as the effects of video game violence on adolescents, the impact of new media technology on political campaigns, and role of technology in health and organizational communication are part of this minor. This minor would be a nice complement to students majoring in the social sciences, the arts, engineering or design. Employment opportunities exist in the corporate sector, communication technology industries, and niche areas such as health and entertainment.

The Communication Technology minor requires the completion of at least four courses for 20 credits, including one foundational course. Upon completion of the minor, students should file the Minor Program Form with a college or school counselor. Any variation from the program described below needs the approval of an undergraduate advisor in the School of Communication.

Required foundational courses (5 credit hours)
Comm 240 – Introduction to Communication Technology (5)

Students are strongly encouraged to take the foundational course before enrolling in the electives.

Choose at least three from these electives (15 credit hours)
Comm 311 – Visual Communication (5)
Comm 341 – Policy Issues in Comm Tech (5)
Comm 611 – Communication and Multimedia (5)
Comm 638 – Communication and e-Health (5)
Comm 650 – Investigating Comm through Comm Tech (5)
Comm 653 – Political Comm and e-Democracy (5)
Comm 654 – Social Implications of Technology (5)
Comm 655 – Computer Interface and Human Identity (5)
Comm 656 – Information Technology and Org Comm (5)
Comm 657 – Technology of Communication (5)
Organizational Communication

The minor in Organizational Communication provides students with an understanding of the role of communication in organizational contexts. Courses focus on how organizations interact with internal and external constituencies.

Majors in business and consumer affairs with an interest in examining the role of small group discussion on decision making, or how knowledge is shared within an organization, or how strategic communication is designed to meet goals and objectives will find this minor interesting. This minor will be of advantage to students aspiring for careers as communication specialists in business and management.

The Organizational Communication minor requires the completion of at least four courses for 20 credits, including one foundational course. Upon completion of the minor, students should file the Minor Program Form with a college or school counselor. Any variation from the program described below needs the approval of an undergraduate advisor in the School of Communication.

Required foundational courses (5 credit hours)
Comm 325 – Introduction to Org Comm (5)

Students are strongly encouraged to take the foundational course before enrolling in the electives.

Choose at least three courses from these electives (15 credit hours)
Comm 368 – Intercultural Comm in Org. Contexts (5)
Comm 531 – Communication and Conflict Mgmt (5)
Comm 628 – Contemporary Persuasion Theory (5)
Comm 631 – Communication and Decision Making (5)
Comm 635 – Small Groups and Organizations (5)
Comm 656 – Information Technology and Org. Comm (5)
Comm 657 – Technology of Communication (5)
Media and Society Minor

The minor in Media and Society provides students with an understanding of the impact of media on everyday life. The role of media is examined from multiple perspectives, including psychological, social, political and cultural.

The media are an integral part of our society. Students from a variety of majors with an interest in public opinion, media effects and media advocacy would find this minor to be valuable. The relationships between media, entertainment, politics, policy and culture are some of the issues addressed within the minor.

The Media and Society minor requires the completion of at least four courses for 20 credits, including one foundational course. Upon completion of the minor, students should file the Minor Program Form with a college or school counselor. Any variation from the program described below needs the approval of an undergraduate advisor in the School of Communication.

Required foundational courses (5 credit hours)
Comm 642 – Mass Comm and Society (5)

Students are strongly encouraged to take the foundational course before enrolling in the electives.

Choose at least three from these electives (15 credit hours)
Comm 501 – Mass Communication and Youth (5)
Comm 502 – Crime and News Media (5)
Comm 604 – Media Ethics (5)
Comm 606 – Development of Mass Media in America (5)
Comm 607 – Mass Comm Law (5)
Comm 613 – Media Entertainment (5)
Comm 614 – Political Communication (5)
Comm 620 – Public Opinion and Communication (5)
Comm 640 – Science Communication (5)
Comm 653 – Political Communication and e-Democracy (5)
Comm 666 – Communication and Popular Culture (5)
General Minor in Communication

The General Minor is currently available to students. This minor provides an overview of the different areas of study within communication. Students take five prescribed courses as part of this minor.

Courses required for the minor (25 credit hours)
Comm 200 – Comm in Society (5)
Comm 240 – Intro to Comm Technology (5)
Comm 320 – Intro to Interpersonal Comm (5)
Comm 431 – Strategic Communication Principles (5)
Comm 642 – Mass Comm & Society (5)
