Melissa and Heather,

Here is the most recent and final revised Human Rights minor proposal that Tony sent me. Arts and Sciences is fine with these changes without having to send them back to our curriculum panels.

Thank you,

Steve

Subject: Human Rights minor

Dear Heather and Steve,

We have decided to resubmit the Human Rights minor as 15-hour minor. Steve, thanks for pointing out what I hadn’t changed. Everything is ok now, I think.

I’m not sure that I’m doing the right thing by submitting the minor proposal to you directly. Please tell me what to do if some other action is required. Thanks to both of you for all your help with this.

Tony

Re: Approval of Minor in Human Rights

Dear Meg:

The SBS Panel on October 3, 2014 approved a proposal by the department of International Studies to establish an undergraduate minor program in Human Rights.

The proposal is motivated by the growing importance of human rights in the increasingly complex and diverse world. The minor provides students an opportunity to explore the issue from a multiplicity of perspectives. The disciplinary and inter-disciplinary perspectives include anthropology, childhood, culture, disability, economics, folklore, gender, law, literature, political science, public policy, sociology, and immigration studies. The methodological perspectives include comparative, ethnographic, rhetorical, historical and social scientific approaches. The strength of the program lies in its variety and flexibility.

The panel agreed with the proposal and recommended only a minor change to the wording of the advising sheet. The proposal was initially submitted in March 2014 and had received feedback from this panel. The panel noted that the concerns raised in the initial submission, including concurrences, have been addressed satisfactorily.

The panel's decision to approve the proposal was unanimous.

Sincerely,

Pok-sang Lam

A PROPOSAL FOR AN INTERDISCIPLINARY MINOR IN HUMAN RIGHTS

To: ASC Curriculum Committee

From: Anthony Mughan, Director, Undergraduate International Studies Program (UISP)

Background

As the world has become more complex and the inherent diversity of its constituent populations more salient and, often, controversial, academia, governments, national and international organizations, private foundations, and the like have increasingly focused their attention on the often-contested rights of individuals and groups, and especially of minorities whether they be defined by economics, politics, social or cultural circumstances, sexuality, or disability. What rights do these individuals and groups actually have, what rights should they enjoy, and how can the situation be remedied when there is a discrepancy between the two? These questions are usually addressed under the rubric of human rights, which are basically held by advocates to be freedoms to which individuals are entitled simply by virtue of being human. Their basis is respect for the principle of individual freedom and dignity and, as such, human rights are held to be universal. They are guaranteed freedoms to which everyone is entitled – no matter whom they are or where they live – simply because they are alive. This proposal envisions the creation of a Human Rights minor within the Undergraduate International Studies Program (UISP) whose focus will be the theory and practice of human rights on both a national and global scale. This minor will be independent of the Program’s track structure.

Rationale

Human rights is not only a practice, but also an emergent and increasingly diverse field of academic study. What forms do human rights take? Which of them are widely accepted and which widely contested? What are the bases of advocacy and contestation for different kinds of rights? What are the implications for individuals and the community of the denial or granting of rights to individuals and groups? This minor provides students with the opportunity to explore such questions from a multiplicity of disciplinary, interdisciplinary and methodological perspectives. The disciplinary and interdisciplinary perspectives include anthropology, childhood, culture, disability, economics, folklore, gender, law, literature, political science, public policy, sociology, and refugee and migration studies. The methodological perspectives range widely and include comparative, ethnographic, historical, rhetorical and social scientific approaches, to name but a few.

Ohio State is well-placed to offer a first-class minor in human rights because of the breadth and depth of approaches to this topic that it boasts. Looking at curricula across its departments and colleges, one is struck by the pervasiveness of faculty interested in this topic and of courses dealing with it. In addition, the University has already hosted several interdisciplinary conferences, symposia, and lectures that have been sponsored by Arts and Sciences, the Humanities Institute, the Mershon Center for International Security, and several other academic units. These events were widely attended by students and faculty, and spawned the conversations that led to the design of this minor. Currently lacking, however, is the opportunity to gain a coherent, interdisciplinary perspective on how human rights has shaped the cultural, economic, and political fabric of the modern and contemporary world. The minor intends to fill this void and offer the Ohio State student body the opportunity to engage in the academic study of the dynamic influence of human rights on international and national politics, policy, activism, and culture. It is anticipated that its audience will appeal to students in the various Colleges in the Arts and Sciences as well as in the Colleges of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences and Social Work.

Curriculum

The proposal is for a 15-hour interdisciplinary minor in human rights. All students will take the same introductory course, which must be passed with a grade of C-, or higher. The remaining 12 credit hours will be satisfied by choosing two courses from each of the Arts and Humanities and Social course groupings below. The first of them offers an essentially arts and humanities perspective on human rights, while the second offers a social science perspective. To be precise, the proposed curriculum is:

Required Course (3 hours)

IS 3450: Human Rights: An Introduction

Electives (12 hours: 2 courses from each of the two groupings below and at least 2 of the 4 chosen courses must be at 4000 level or above)

Arts and Humanities Courses

This minor will be open to International Studies (IS) majors, as well as to members of the undergraduate student body as a whole. No course will be allowed to count towards the IS major. In the event that a course were to be required on both this minor and the major, it will count towards the minor and students will be required to substitute for it on their major. All the courses counting towards this minor are approved and already on the books. They are also generally taught by faculty in the departments offering them. Students must maintain a C average in the minor, and no grade lower than C- will count towards the minor.

Administration

The minor will be listed in the OSU Bulletin as “an interdisciplinary minor offered by the Undergraduate International Studies Program.” Individual departments will not be listed so as to allow for the addition and subtraction of courses as circumstances in the contributing units change and/or as new units list courses in the minor. To declare a minor, students will meet with a UISP advisor, with whom they will plan their minor program. Proposed changes to the course content of the minor will be discussed by the Steering Committee that created it (Drs. Wendy Hesford, Anthony Mughan and Amy Shuman) and referred to the UISP Oversight Committee for approval.

Departments wishing to propose courses for the Human Rights minor should submit the following to the UISP Director:

- A fully articulated syllabus for the course(s);
- A statement (two pages maximum) describing how the proposed course(s) would add to the Human Rights minor;
- A description of the history of the proposed course – i.e., is it new? How many times has it been offered before and how often will it be offered in the future?
A short biography of the faculty member who will have primary responsibility for teaching the course

All the courses that figure, now or in the future, in the proposed minor will have to share the characteristics of being offered regularly, preferably once a year but no less than once every two years.

Competition

To the best we can establish from websites, the only competition for this program in the state of Ohio is the BA in Human Rights Studies at the University of Dayton. No similar programs could be located in surrounding states.

The other programs we have identified are:

- University of Connecticut: Human Rights Institute
  Undergraduate Major and Minor in Human Rights

- Columbia University: Institute for the Study of Human Rights
  Undergraduate Major and Concentration in Human Rights

- Barnard College: Joint Major in Human Rights Studies

- University of Minnesota: Undergraduate Concentration in Human Rights and Justice
  Offered through the Global Studies Program

- Trinity College: Undergraduate Major and Minor in Human Rights

- University of Washington: Undergraduate Minor in Human Rights

- Macalester College: Human Rights and Humanitarianism Interdepartmental Concentration

Expected Student Enrollment

Year 1: 10 students

Year 2: 25 students

Year 3: 40 students

Implementation of Proposed Minor
Letters of concurrence from the heads of contributing departments are attached to this proposal (see Appendix A). It is hoped that the proposal will be approved by both ASC Curriculum Committee and CAA by the end of the 2014 Autumn semester so that implementation will be possible in Spring 2015.

Questions regarding this proposal should be addressed to Anthony Mughan, 33 Townshend Hall, 1885 Neil Avenue, CAMPUS; his telephone number is 292-9657 and his e-mail address is mughan.1@osu.edu.
Human Rights Minor Concurrences

Original Request

Rick,

International Studies has collaborated with Professors Wendy Hesford and Amy Shuman of the Department of English to create an interdisciplinary minor in Human Rights. A first draft of our proposal is attached to give you a clear idea of its proposed structure. Comments and suggestions are welcome, but I also need written confirmation of your agreement to the inclusion of the two Political Science courses (4455 and 3460) in the minor. Thanks in advance.

Tony

Tony (and Clare)

I believe it is sufficient for me simply to express our concurrence in an email. So, having consulted with a number of our senior faculty, I am happy to agree to the inclusion of the three English courses (4573.02, 4595 and 4597) in the new interdisciplinary minor in Human Rights. As mentioned in an earlier message I do have to stress that this cannot commit us to running any particular course on a particular schedule.

Do let me know if you require this in hard format.

Dear Tony,

I have looked at the proposed IS interdisciplinary minor in Human Rights. It looks attractive, timely, and rigorous. I confirm my agreement to include in this minor both PS 4455 Human Rights and PS 3460 Global Justice.
Sincerely,

Rick

Hi, Tony,

The brief proposal looks fine except please make sure that our courses are listed as Women's, Gender and Sexuality Studies (WGSST), not Women's Studies.

I agree to the inclusion of the four WGSST courses (2305, 3370, 3520 and 3302) in the minor.

Hello Tony,

Please feel free to include AAAS 3083 in the new interdisciplinary minor in Human Rights. Do you need a formal letter?

Hi Tony,
Sorry that I did not receive your email until the student forwarded your email to me.

This interdisciplinary minor is very timely. I strongly support your proposal and agree to include Sociology 3460 and 5563 in the minor. Thanks,
